

Celebrating more than 130 years of encouraging economic research

The American Economic Association (AEA) was founded in 1885 in Saratoga, New York by a small group interested in economics and is now the largest professional association representing the interests of economists from the around the world.

The AEA is headquartered in Nashville, TN with a publications office in Pittsburgh, PA.

Who We Are

Once composed primarily of college and university professors in economics, the American Economic Association (AEA) now attracts 20,000+ members from academe, business, government, and research organizations. All are professionals or graduate-level students dedicated to economics research.

AEA Mission

Established in 1885, the AEA is a non-profit, non-partisan, scholarly association dedicated to the discussion and publication of economics research while promoting the understanding of economics.

AEA Leadership

The AEA is governed by an elected executive board, several standing committees, and a Secretary/Treasurer who oversees an association staff of 50. Many AEA leaders come from or move into influential and responsible roles in government, industry, and academe.

AEA Journals

AEA publishes prestigious scholarly economics journals accessible via online subscription. The AEA journals offer economists a standardized quality forum for sharing their research. These journals are mainstays in economics departments and libraries where they inspire future research and stimulate thoughtful discussion. American Economic Review, Journal of Economic Literature, Journal of Economic Perspectives, four field-specific American Economic Journals covering Applied Economics, Economic Policy, Macroeconomics, and Microeconomics, AER: Insights, and AEA Papers and Proceedings.

ASSA/Annual Meeting

In conjunction with 62 other economics associations, the AEA organizes and manages the largest gathering of economists in the world (13,000+ attendees). More than 3,000 presenters have an opportunity to share their research within 550 sessions of varied economics topics. Papers from 30 of the sessions are published in the AEA Papers and Proceedings. A Continuing Education program is also available, and select ASSA webcasts can be found online.

AEA Careers

AEA offers job seekers and employers access to an employment service known as JOE Network (Job Openings for Economists). JOE Network is tailored to meet the needs of the economics job market and includes a mechanism for faculty to easily upload and manage recommendation letters. Completing the cycle, many interviews are held at the job fair in conjunction with the Annual Meeting in January, and a job "Scramble" is offered in March for remaining vacancies.

Honors and Awards

AEA administers an honors and awards program including the prestigious John Bates Clark Medal honoring an outstanding economist under the age of 40. Four Best Paper Prizes are awarded each year to articles adjudged most outstanding in each of the four American Economic Journals. The AEA also recognizes Foreign Honorary Members and Distinguished Fellows for their achievements.

EconLit

AEA's comprehensive bibliographic searchable database of economics literature from around the world, including working papers from leading universities, PhD dissertations, peer-reviewed journals, books, and book reviews. AEA's role as a steward for the ever-growing body of economics literature includes maintenance of the JEL Codes classification system, a standard method of classifying and retrieving scholarly literature in economics.

Resources for economists including guides for students, teaching tools for educators, data sources, research highlights, an online economics discussion forum, and much more are available on the AEA website. For more information, please visit www.aeaweb.org.
