

Disclosure statement: Katelyn Heath

This data for this project, “The Long-Run Impacts of Special Education” uses data provided to the researchers by the Texas Education Agency. The conclusions of this research do not necessarily reflect the opinions or official position of the Texas Education Agency, the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board, the Texas Workforce Commission, or the state of Texas.

Katelyn Heath, one of the authors of this paper has research support from the National Academy of Education and the National Academy of Education/Spencer Dissertation Fellowship Program, the Bronfenbrenner Center for Translational Research, Christopher Wildeman, Cornell University Graduate School, Cornell Policy Analysis and Management Department, and Cornell Economics department Labor Grant in Economics. Any opinions, findings, and conclusions or recommendations expressed in this material are those of the authors and do not necessarily reflect the opinions or official position of the Texas Education Agency, the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board, the Texas Workforce Commission, or the state of Texas.

This research has been reviewed and approved by Cornell University IRB.